The scenrity of the malls should be as inviolable as the national credit, its regularity like the rising of the sun. It is because they are unreliable in these cornects that the public are driven to more expensive modes of commu nication and transportation. The business would be managed more to the public satisfaction, if a community could select as its Post Master from its own husiness classes, some man of tried integ rity and of executive capacity. The Presiden knows no more than the man in the moon whether Mr Smith or Mr Jones is the best per son for a local office, or whether the commu nity will approve the selection of althor. It was this jeniously of Pacentire power that took the power of appointment of the Judges from the Governor and heatowed it upon the people. The expediency of this change may be a matter of doubt, but there can be no two opinions that it would be better for all concerned, if Post masters were elected by the prople ,
